Love attitudes in Black South Africa: A comparison of school and university students.
Philbrick, Joseph L; Stones, Christopher R.

A review of the cross-cultural literature indicates an absence of research on love and romance in South Africa. The Munro-Adams Love Attitude Scale (see record 1979-11012-001) was administered to 143 Black secondary school pupils and university students, all from the Eastern Cape region. Adolescent males, but not females, tended to become more romantic after enrolling for university studies.